GIRLS

Jessie

I hate being this age. I do, I really hate it. I'm 15. You can't do anything, you can't go anywhere. Everyone treats you like a kid. I can't wait to be older. I don't talk to my parents about anything important. I mean, I tell my mom a lot because then she'll trust me. But there are some things—they're old so I don't think they really understand. We just talk to our friends when we want advice. And there are definitely loads of girls who go on diets when they don't need to. I know some people who get really upset and obsessive about their weight.

Amy

I like being 15. You don't have any real responsibilities. I think things are pretty easy for us. And it's easy to talk to my parents—they're really cool. In fact, some of my friends talk to them too, because they can't talk to their own parents. The future? I don't know. You have to live your own life first.

Helen

I want to be a model, and I have some photos I'm going to send out after the exams. Marriage? Well, I'd like to meet a nice guy and maybe get married, but I definitely don't want children. My sister has three kids, and she's only 23. I don't want that to happen to me.

Jackie

There's nothing to do in this town when you're our age. There's one club, and they have 15–18 nights, but that's it. And they're terrible. We spend a lot of time chatting to our friends on the Internet—it's really addictive. There's this disco they organize for all the schools. But all the teachers go. It's awful.

3 WRITING

Are the things that Jessie, Amy, Helen, and Jackie say also true about life for teenage girls in your country? Discuss the similarities and differences. Then write a paragraph comparing life for teenage girls in the U.S. and your country.

Page21-3.Writing:

Helen says that she doesn't want to have children at this age, so I agree with her because I know girls that have children and sometimes don't have enough money to eat them. Also in the same way that Amy I just trust my mom because she has always been with me in any trouble, and she understands me too because she sometimes tells me about her past when she was a teenager. Also like Jessie I know people who really get upset and obsessed about their weight because most of my family is sometimes like that and I don't care about, but I just know something I don't want to be very fat.
